Professor Brawn Cafe 06 November 2011

By Family Dining in Singapore \(Albums\) · Updated about a month ago · Taken at Professor Brawn Cafe @ Novena #02-78/79 Novena Square, 238 Thomson Road Singapore 307683

We stumbled upon this cafe whilst hunting for a lunch place at Novena. The kids were attracted by the colourful character and we were attracted by the near to empty restaurant. So we enrolled ourselves to the university of food.

I like the little touches in the decor to complete the whole experience. Thick Harry Potter-like books as menu and chalkboard inspired table top.

The boy is studying hard for his orders. The stories are pretty fun to read in the menu.

Little one joins the fun flipping through the pages

Mushroom soup.

Huge portion!

It is thick, creamy and its filled with chunks and bits of mushroom. The taste is rich and is a tad lighter than the Soup Spoon. We asked around the table and we all voted for this!

Cheese Fries.

Popping hot fries with cheese dips. A hot favourite amongst children and adults.

Spaghetti Bolognese.

'Herby' al dente pasta that has the right amount of beef and sauce. The taste is well-balanced and the freshly cut herbs leaves a nice round taste after every bite.

Grilled Chicken with Truffle Sauce.

These days we are starting to cook with a dash of truffle.

My wife loves this! The chicken is tender and well cooked. The sauce is flavourful and the truffle magic worked its way through every last drop on the plate.

Pan-seared Norwegian Salmon.
The soft and flaky salmon is held nicely by the crispy skin.
I must say its very fresh because the kids too 1/4 of it.
Now I can't say much about the carbo fillers. I think its sweet potatoes. Its too much for me.

Ice cream!

We sat away from the restaurant. It was like a canopy and we pretty much had all the space to ourselves. But one thing though, the call bell was not working. We had to go to and fro several times to request for service and bills.

Alexis Cheong looks really awesome! sounds like every item was a hit. food places always intrigue me, I need to go check out soon..
